The importance of the Qur'an for Muslims

Key words:

Qur'an – literally means 'recitation'. It is the Holy book for Muslims
Respect – to treat something or someone with the best of manners.

Illiterate – Someone who can neither read nor write.

Haafiz—Someone who has learnt all the Quran off by heart.

Wudu - a special way of washing. which involves washing hands, faces,

Basic facts:

•The Qur'an is the holy book for Muslims just like the Bible is for Christians.

•It is written in Arabic.

•Muslims believe that no part of the Qur'an can be changed or re-written because it is the word of God and so it is perfect.

Where did the Quran come from?

Over a period of 23 years God (Allah in Arabic) revealed his message through the archangel Gabriel to Muhammad. The message was to worship the one true god. These revelations were written down by his companions (Muhammad was illiterate) to form the Qur'an. Muslims believe the Quran is the final book to be revealed by Allah after a collection of other books including the Torah and the Bible.

What is written in the Koran?

The Quran has rules and laws written in it about believing In one God, prayer, charity, fasting, what types of food are and are not allowed to be eaten. It explains about marriage, divorce, buying and selling, crimes and punishments and many more.

What are some of the laws in the Quran?

Some of the laws in the Qur'an include the following: 'Worship God and obey and be kind to your parents', 'Do not kill those who have not harmed you', 'Do not eat pork (as it is a filthy animal)', 'Do not drink Alcohol or use any drugs, as these harm the body', 'Show forgiveness and be forgiving' and 'Don't be evil to the person who has been evil to you – be patient and forgiving'.

How do Muslims show respect to the Quran?

Because Muslims believe the Quran IS the word of God they do the following to show their love and respect for it:

Firstly, they perform Wudu (a special way of washing themselves) which involves washing their hands, faces, arms and feet.

Secondly, copies of the Qur'an are sometimes kept wrapped up in a cloth around it and they are always places on a high shelf in order to keep it safe and to show respect. Thirdly, they put it on a special stand like the one in the picture so that it doesn't touch the floor as the floor can be a dirty place and sometimes even smelly!
