Jewish Beliefs

The Four Stages of Life

- Jews believe in four important stages of life, and mark each with a religious ceremony.
- The four are: birth, becoming an adult, marriage and death.

-When Jewish boys (aged 13) and Jewish girls (aged 12) become Jewish adults, they have a bar mitzvah (for boys) or bat mitzvah (for girls) ceremony. At these ages, Jewish religion, law and social life judges that the boys and girls become responsible for their own actions. The ceremony is usually held on the first Shabbat (Jewish day of rest) after their birthday. In a bar mitzvah ceremony, a boy must read passages from the Torah.

The Story of Abraham

-Abraham is an important figure in Judaism, Christianity and Islam. His story is told in the Genesis section of the Bible.

-According to the story, Abraham made an agreement with God, in which he promised to be faithful and to teach his laws to the world. In return God gave Abraham and his descendants the land of Israel. Even though Abraham was 99, and his wife Sarah 90, God enabled them to have a son, Isaac, forming the first Jewish family.

Ceremonies and Festivals

- Jews enjoy many ceremonies and festivals as a part of their religion.

-Passover takes place in March or April, and is when Jewish people remember how God brought them out of Egypt (the Exodus). A special meal is created to remind the Jews of the good and bad times in the past. It includes hard boiled egg, parsley, boiled potato, lettuce, horseradish, chopped apples and walnuts.

-Hannukah takes place in December and is known as 'the Jewish festival of lights.' People light candles, exchange presents, and eat foods such as latkes (potato pancakes) and sufganiot (jam doughnuts).

Jewish Dietary Laws

What does eating certain foods have to do with religion?

If religion is concerned with every aspect of human life, then it must also include the food we eat. By attaching Jewish ideas to food laws, Jewish people are reminded of their identity and relationship with God every few hours when they eat.

There are some food laws laid down in the Torah, and in addition to this, Jewish communities in different parts of the world have also come up with their own ways of preparing food and choosing the foods they eat. So for example, an Indian Jew is more likely than a Spanish Jew to eat curry, but both the Indian and the Spanish Jew would obey the rules in the Torah about which kinds of meat or fish could be included in their meal.

What does 'Kosher' mean?

'Kosher' translates roughly as 'acceptable' – it fits the laws set out in the Torah. These laws forbid the eating of certain foods and also say that dairy and meat foods should be stored and prepared separately.

Which foods are Kosher?

According to the Torah (Genesis, Chapter 9), God said to Noah that 'every moving thing that liveth should be meat for you.' He did, however, give certain limits:

Animals: The list of kosher foods includes all mammals which chew the cud and have split hooves (e.g. sheep, cows, deer). Any mammal which does not fit this description (e.g. pigs, rabbits, horses) are not allowed.

Birds: Birds are kosher if they are domesticated (farmed), e.g. chickens, ducks, geese and turkeys. Wild birds and birds of prey are not allowed. Eggs from any non-kosher birds are not allowed either.

Fish: All fish that have fins and scales are kosher. Shell fish, or sea creatures without scales and fins are not allowed.

Vegetables and fruit: All vegetables and fruit are kosher, unless they have been invaded by insects or grubs.

What are the laws about blood?

It is forbidden in the Jewish religion to consume blood. So animals that are to be eaten must be killed in a special way to ensure that as much blood as possible is removed from the meat. Once then animal has been killed, it must be soaked and salted. It would not be acceptable, therefore, to serve up beef to an Orthodox Jew and assume that it will be fine. It needs to have been bought from a kosher butcher and prepared in this special way.

What are the laws about milk (dairy) and meat?

The Torah says: 'Thou shalt not boil a calf in its mother's milk'.

The rules for orthodox (strict) Jews are that milk (dairy) and meat products must not be stored, prepared or cooked together. All utensils used in the preparation of these foods must be kept completely separate, as well as the tea towels used to dry them. A kosher household will have two sets of plates, cutlery etc and they would never, for example, fry a steak in butter or put butter on a chicken sandwich.

Some very strict Jews also wait between eating the two types of food, from one to six hours, so that a complete separation of the foods is maintained, even in their bodies.

Fish, vegetables and fruit can be served with either meat or dairy products (but not both at the same time).

Due date:

Hanukkah

What is Hanukkah?

Hanukkah, the Jewish Festival of Lights, begins on the evening of the 25th day of the Hebrew month called Kislev. In our calendar, this falls in the month of November or December.

Hanukkah means 'rededication' and reminds Jews of a miracle which took place in Jerusalem over 2,000 years ago...

King Antiochus of Syria was not a Jew, and he was very cruel and unkind to the Jewish people. He wanted the Jews to worship the Greek god Zeus, and wouldn't let them worship their own god at their temple in Jerusalem.

He then put up a statue of himself in the Jewish temple and the Jews were ordered to bow down before him. The Ten Commandments forbid Jews to worship statues or idols and so they refused.

This made the Jews very angry, and they decided to fight the Syrian King.

After three years, even though they were greatly outnumbered, they won their battle. But when they returned to their temple, they found that it was all but destroyed. So they had to rebuild and clean it in order to make it holy once again. They did this by re-lighting the temple's lamp called a Menorah. This lamp was really meant to burn all the time.

They could only find one jar of oil to light the flame, and this they thought would only last for one day. But instead it kept the lamp burning for eight days and nights. And so Hanukkah celebrates this miracle.
